INTRODUCTION

IN ORDER TO LEARN A FOREIGN LANGUAGE efficiently students must follow a series of organized, graded lessons which cover the essential points of grammar, pronunciation, vocabulary, and usage. They must not only study such material to learn new words and grammatical constructions, but also practice what they have already learned in drill sessions with native speakers of the language. There are a number of textbooks designed to give that sort of well-rounded introduction to Japanese. (One which explains grammar and usage particularly well is Eleanor H. Jorden's Beginning Japanese.)

This handbook of Japanese verbs is not designed to provide students with a complete course in Japanese. Rather, it is a reference work which gives a concise, easy-to-understand description of Japanese verbal inflection and derivation, together with tables showing all the necessary forms of 501 important and widely used Japanese verbs.

501 Japanese Verbs should be of help to both beginning and advanced students. For beginners, it constitutes a valuable aid in learning basic verbal inflection. Most textbooks only provide students with a few examples to illustrate the principles of inflection. This means that students are hampered because there is no way to check a given form of an unfamiliar verb. With 501 Japanese Verbs students will be able to quickly verify the form in which they are interested. By presenting the full array of verbal inflection and derivation in tables, this book also enables beginning students to see the language as a system, rather than as a haphazard collection of stems and endings.

More advanced students will also profit from this systematic view of the language, because it will help them to organize the many verb forms they have learned into a systematic body of data. Such formalization is especially necessary for anyone who plans to teach the language some day.

PRONUNCIATION

A detailed treatment of the Japanese sound system is beyond the scope of this work, but it is necessary to give some explanation of the value of the letters used in our romanization (which is similar to that employed in Jorden's Beginning Japanese). In the following explanation, italics represent our romanization while English sounds and words used as examples are enclosed in single quotation marks. (A more extensive description of Japanese pronunciation, which includes a section on pitch accent, is available on pages xxi to xlvi of part 1 of Beginning Japanese.)

ry	flapped 'r' followed by palatalization.

The Japanese equivalent of the English syllable is not really a syllable but a mora, a unit of relative meter like a beat in music. People may speak quickly or slowly, but within a given stream of speech each mora will occupy the same length of time. This is true regardless of the type or number of sounds which make up each mora. For instance, the five words

sa.ku.ra	'cherry'
a.o.i.	'blue'
hi.ñ.i	'quality'
ki.p.pu	'ticket'
ryo.ka.ñ	'inn'

each consist of three mora (with the division indicated by dots) and each takes the same length of time to say. These examples serve to illustrate all the possible mora types in Japanese: a single vowel, a vowel preceded by a single consonant, a vowel preceded by a cluster of consonant plus y, and a single consonant. Only five consonants occur as independent mora: k (only before k), s (only before s), t (only before t), p (only before p), and ñ (in all occurrences).

The system of syllable division in Japanese can be summed up in two simple rules:

1. THERE IS NEVER MORE THAN ONE VOWEL IN A SYLLABLE. This holds true whether the vowels are of the same type or of different types. A word like oi 'nephew' is pronounced as o + i, not as the 'oy' in the English word 'boy.' A word like yooi 'preparation' is pronounced as yo + o + i. In some romanization systems two o, a, or u which occur in juxtaposition are treated as a single 'long vowel' and are written as ō, ā, and ū, respectively. In this book, however, they are written as oo, aa, and uu.

2. EXCEPT FOR THOSE CONSONANTS WHICH OCCUR AS INDEPENDENT MORA (ñ in all occurrences and k, s, t, and p before themselves) CONSONANTS ARE ALWAYS PRONOUNCED WITH THE VOWELS WHICH FOLLOW THEM. Thus the words beñkyoo 'study', hañnoo 'reaction', and hakkiri 'clearly' are pronounced as be.ñ.kyo.o, ha.ñ.no.o, and ha.k.ki.ri.

Japanese does not have a stress accent like that of English in which some syllables of a word are given special prominence by being pronounced louder than others. Instead, Japanese has a pitch accent system. This means that syllables are all pronounced with about the same force (sometimes giving a rather monotonous impression to the stress-accent oriented American) but some are pronounced on a higher pitch than others.

There is considerable variation in pitch accent depending upon regional dialect, but in the Tokyo accent, which is the standard for education and public discourse throughout Japan, there are three possible patterns, each of which is illustrated in one of the following words. (The solid line above the words indicates relative pitch.)

koomori 'bat' a high-pitched syllable followed by low-pitched syllable(s) tomodati 'friend' a low-pitched syllable followed by high-pitched syllable(s) mizuumi 'lake' high-pitched syllable(s) preceded by a single low-pitched syllable and followed by low-pitched syllable(s)

As seen above, there is always a change in pitch between the first and second mora of a word. (This example also illustrates why the romanization used in this book uses oo rather than ō. If ō were used it would be impossible to show the change in pitch between the first two mora of koomori.)

What is most perceptible to the human ear is the contrast between a high-pitched mora and an immediately following low-pitched mora. Therefore, words such as tomodati which do not have this contrast sound flat, and are said to be unaccented or to have a “flat accent.” There are also words such as imooto ‘younger sister’ which have what might be called a latent accent in their final syllable. When spoken by themselves they sound as flat as tomodati, but their accent is revealed when they become part of a longer pause group. For instance, when the particle ga is added to tomodati the resulting tomodati ga remains flat, but when this same particle is added to imooto it produces imooto ga, revealing the latent accent by providing a following low-pitched syllable.

When indicating pitch accent in this book we shall use the mark ' above a vowel to indicate a high-pitched syllable immediately before a low-pitched syllable. Thus the above examples would be rendered: kóomori, tomodati (unaccented, so no mark), mizuúmi, and imootó.

It should be mentioned that Japanese pitch accent patterns operate for pause groups, each of which will have one of the three patterns described above. When a word is uttered in isolation it forms a pause group of its own, so its intrinsic accent pattern will be apparent. But when it is incorporated into a larger pause group the accent may shift. For example, the copula désu has what might be called a recessive accent. It appears in isolation or when preceded by an unaccented word, but it is lost when following a word with its own accent. The following examples show this clearly.

kore + désu ka gives Kore désu ka.	'Is it this?'
but dóko + désu ka gives Dóko desu ka.	'Where is it?'

SPEECH LEVELS

Languages are arbitrary systems used for communication within the societies which develop them. Since societies differ in their view of the world, one can expect that languages will differ not only in vocabulary and pronunciation, but also in their fundamental grammatical categories. When native speakers of English confront the Japanese verb this expectation is fully borne out. Instead of the familiar (to them) distinctions involving number and person, they find distinctions between levels of formality and deference which serve to indicate the speaker's relationship to the person spoken to or about.

Proper use of these grammatical categories requires keen judgment as to the relative social status of speaker, listener, and referent, the complexities of overlapping in-group/out-group status, and whether an occasion or relationship is formal or informal. These judgments must be in line with JAPANESE social views, so students' success or failure will depend upon their knowledge of Japanese social customs and attitudes. Within the scope of this book we can only give some explanations regarding the working of these categories as a linguistic system.

FORMALITY

The two sentences Otya o noñda. and Otya o nomimasita. both mean 'I (you, he, she, it, we, or they) drank tea,' but the second is more formal (and polite) than the first. While the formal sentence with nomimasita could be used under any circumstances without giving offence, an adult Japanese would use the sentence with noñda only on informal occasions when speaking to persons of lower social status or to persons of the same status with whom he or she was on close terms, such as members of one's immediate family or close friends at school or at work. While formal and informal sentences are used by both men and women, in general, women's speech tends to be more formal and polite than that of men. (Women also tend to make greater use of the honorific and humble deference levels which are discussed below.)

The style of speech is usually kept uniform throughout a conversation, and is determined by the form of the final verb, adjective, or copula in a sentence. It is this which expresses the general tone of the occasion and of the relationship between the speaker and the person spoken to. Since it is the final verb (adjective or copula) which sets the style, other verbs (adjectives or copula) which may occur earlier in the sentence are usually of the shorter, informal type, even in formal speech. For example, the sentence Kare ga otya o noñda kara, watakushi mo nomimasita. 'He drank tea, so I drank tea too.' is in the formal style even though it contains the informal noñda. Students must be familiar with both forms of the verb, but should use only the formal sentence style until they have learned to whom and under what circumstances they may use the informal style without offending the person spoken to or appearing ludicrous.

DEFERENCE

While the formality style expresses the speaker's attitude toward the person he is speaking to, the deference level expresses the speaker's attitude toward the person he is speaking about. As far as verbs are concerned, the deference level shows the speaker's attitude toward the subject of the verb (even though the subject of the verb may not be mentioned explicitly in the sentence). There are three basic levels: honorific, plain or neutral, and humble when the subject is a person, and another 'neutral-polite' category when the subject is inanimate. The plain level is the most common, with the honorific and humble levels being used when the speaker wishes to express special deference or respect toward someone. The categories of formality and deference operate independently of each other so that each verb form can be classified according to both systems as in the following table, which shows a partial paradigm of the verb kak.u ‘write.’

	INFORMAL	FORMAL
Honorific	okaki ni naru	okaki ni narimasu
Neutral	kaku	kakimasu
Humble	okaki suru	okaki simasu
	okaki itasu	okaki itasimasu

In addition to indicating respect, the use of the humble or honorific level serves to vaguely identify the subject because one never uses the honorific to refer to oneself, nor the humble to refer to the person one is speaking to.* So while kakimasu could mean ‘I (you, he, she, it, we, or they) write.’ okaki ni narimasu could not mean ‘I (or we) write.’ nor could okaki simasu mean ‘You write.’ In the absence of other context the honorific level will refer to an action of the listener, and the humble level will refer to an action of the speaker.

As with the category of formality, the best guide to proper use of deference levels is a thorough knowledge of Japanese social custom. Until the student gains this he can follow the general principle that honorifics are used most often in reference to actions performed by the listener or members of his family, and humble forms are used most often in referring to actions performed by the speaker.

INFLECTION AND DERIVATION OF JAPANESE VERBS

Japanese has two main classes of verbs: those with stems ending in i or e and those whose stems end in consonants. We shall call them Class I and II respectively. The following is a list of basic inflectional endings (informal) using ake.ru ‘open’ and ka + .u ‘win’ as examples. Here the dot shows the division between stem and ending, but it will also be used

*An exception to this is the humble presumptive in which the person spoken to is sometimes covered in an inclusive ‘we.’ For example, Takusii de mairimasyoo ka may mean ‘Shall we (you and I) go by taxi?’

at times to mark the division between the infinitive of a verb and an infinitive-based ending.

	Class I	Class II
Infinitive	ake	kat.i
Indicative	ake.ru	kat.u
Imperative I*	ake.ro	kat.e
Presumptive	ake.yoo	kat.oo
Provisional	ake.reba	kat.eba
Gerund	ake.te	kat.te
Past Indicative	ake.ta	kat.ta
Past Presumptive	ake.taroo	kat.taroo
Conditional	ake.tara	kat.tara
Alternative	ake.tari	kat.tari

*This form is used only by male speakers when speaking harshly. Otherwise it is replaced by more polite informal imperative expressions. Two common ones which we will label informal imperatives II and III are infinitive + nasai (imperative of nasar.u ‘to do’) and gerund + kudasai (imperative of kudasar.u ‘give to me’). Of these the second is the more polite and is the one preferred for general use in making requests.

Comparing the endings for the two verb classes we find that in the last five categories they are the same (-te, -ta, -taroo, -tara, and -tari) but in the first five categories they differ as follows:

	Class I	Class II
Infinitive	-zero	-i
Indicative	-ru	-u
Imperative	-ro	-e
Presumptive	-yoo	-oo
Provisional	-reba	-eba

Except for the discrepancy between the vowels in the two imperative endings, the differences between the endings can be accounted for by a rule to the effect that the initial vowel of a suffix is lost when the stem ends in a vowel (Class I), and the initial consonant of a suffix is lost when the stem ends in a consonant (Class II). For example, kat- + -i = kat.i, but ake- + -i = ake; while ake- + -ru = ake.ru, but kat- + -ru = kat.u.

Turning now to the verb stems we find that both Class I ake- and Class II kat- remain constant throughout the ten categories. This behaviour is typical of Class I verb stems, but not of Class II verb stems. All Class II verb stems which do not end in -t- undergo a change when attached directly to one of the five suffixes which begin with -t- (-te, -ta, -taroo, -tara, and -tari).

These changes differ according to the final consonant of the stem, but all Class II stems which end in the same consonant undergo the same change. All of the possible changes are illustrated in the following list of examples. (-te is used as an example, but the change would be the same before any of the other four -t- endings.)

kas- + -te	becomes kasi.te	(kas.u 'lend') kak- + -te	becomes kai.te	(kak.u 'write')
kag- + -te	becomes kai.de	(kag.u 'sniff') yob- + -te	becomes yoñ.de	(yob.u 'call')
yom- + -te	becomes yoñ.de	(yom.u 'read')
sin- + -te	becomes siñ.de	(sin.u 'die')
kar- + -te	becomes kat.te	(kar.u 'cut')
kaw- + -te	becomes kat.te	(ka(w).u 'buy')*

*Since in Japanese w only occurs before a, Class II verbs whose stems end in this sound do not show it in all forms of the verb, but only when the suffix begins with a.

This concludes our outline of inflection, but Japanese verbs have many more forms which are the result of derivation or the addition of various auxiliary endings. Up until now we have considered only informal affirmative forms. Our next step is to cover the formal affirmative which in both verb classes is derived by attaching the auxiliary verb -mas.u to the infinitive of the original verb. -mas-u occurs only as an ending for other verbs and has no substantive meaning of its own, serving only to raise the level of formality of the verb to which it is attached.

In general -mas.u behaves like a Class II verb, but it lacks an infinitive, has dual forms in the provisional, and has a Class I-type ending -yoo in the presumptive.

Indicative	-mas.u
Imperative	-mas.e
Presumptive	-mas.yoo
Provisional	-mas.eba / -mas.ureba
Gerund	-masi.te
Past Indicative	-masi.ta
Past Presumptive	-masi.taroo
Conditional	-masi.tara
Alternative	-masi.tari

All of these forms except the presumptive and the past and non-past indicative indicate a higher than normal level of formality or politeness. As a rule the imperative -mas.e is only used with honorific verbs such as nasar.u ‘to do,’ and kudasar.u ‘give to me.’ In the past presumptive the infinitive + masi.taroo is usually replaced by a combination of the informal past indicative + des.yoo (the formal presumptive form of the copula). A similar construction using des.yoo is also used in the non-past presumptive category. This differs from the -mas.yoo form not in degree of formality, but in the identity of the subject and other modal content. Consequently the -mas.yoo form and the informal indicative + des.yoo form will be labeled presumptive I and II respectively. The two forms using des.yoo are paralleled by informal ones using dar.oo the informal presumptive form of the copula.

We are now ready to move to the informal negative category. Here we find that, except for the imperative and presumptive, the “verb” is really an adjective derived by adding the adjectival ending -ana.i ‘negative’ to the stem of the verb. The resulting negative adjective then inflects like any other adjective. It will be noted that our earlier juncture rule works for -ana.i too because the initial vowel -a- is lost when it is joined to a Class I stem ending in a vowel.

		Class I	Class II
Indicative		ake.nai	kat.anai
Imperative	I	ake.ru na	kat.u na
	II	ake.nasaru na	kati.nasaru na
	III	ake.nai de kudasai	kat.anai de kudasai
Presumptive	*I	ake.mai	kat.umai
	II	ake.nai daroo	kat.anai daroo
Provisional		ake.nakereba	kat.anakereba
Gerund	I	ake.nai de	kat.anai de
	II	ake.nakute	kat.anakute

*In the Class I presumptive I there is optional variation between ake.mai, in which mai follows the stem directly, and ake.ru.mai in which it follows the affirmative non-past indicative as it does with Class II verbs. We shall use the shorter form in our tables.

**While gerund I has the same range of uses as the affirmative gerund, the negative gerund II is more limited. It is not used with auxiliary ‘giving’ verbs to form polite request or polite command constructions such as negative imperative III.

Past Indicative	ake.nakatta	kat.anakatta
Past Presumptive	ake.nakattaroo	kat.anakattaroo
	ake.nakatta daroo	kat.anakatta daroo
Conditional	ake.nakattara	kat.anakattara
Alternative	ake.nakattari	kat.anakattari

Here we find three informal imperative constructions corresponding to those mentioned in connection with the informal affirmative imperative. The ‘na’ used to form the negative imperative I is a negative command particle.

In the formal negative category we find the -mas.u ending again as well as various compounds using the copula.

		Class I	Class II
Indicative		ake.maseñ	kati.maseñ
Imperative		oake nasaimasu na	okati nasaimasu na
Presumptive	I	ake.masumai	kati.masumai
	II	ake.nai desyoo	kat.anai desyoo
Provisional*		ake-maseñ nara(ba)	kati.maseñ nara(ba)
Gerund		ake.maseñ de	kati.maseñ de
Past Indicative		ake.maseñ desita	kati.maseñ desita
Past Presumptive		ake.maseñ desitaroo	kati.maseñ desitaroo
		ake.nakatta desyoo	kat.anakatta desyoo
Conditional		ake.maseñ desitara	kati.maseñ desitara
Alternative		ake.maseñ desitari	kati.maseñ desitari

The semantic difference between the presumptive I and II is the same as that between the two forms of the affirmative formal presumptive. The imperative, gerund, and alternative forms given here occur only in conjunction with honorifics or when using a very formal style.

Up till now we have dealt with derivational endings such as -mas.u and -ana.i which have a range of inflection only within a given category such as ‘formal’ or ‘informal negative.’ The remaining derivations are different in that they result in new verbs which can themselves take the entire range of inflectional and derivational endings which we have described up to this point. (See pages 411 and 482 for examples.)

First we will consider the derivation of the passive, potential, causative

*Of the two possible provisional forms of the copula: nara and naraba, the shorter version is used more often in colloquial conversation and is the one we shall use hereinafter in our tables.

and causative passive forms. Since the inflectional endings for these newly derived verbs will be the same as those we have already given for Class I verbs we will show only their informal affirmative indicative (citation) form in the tables which follow.

	(Original) Class I	(Original) Class II
Passive	ake.rareru	kat.areru
Potential	ake.rareru	kat.eru
Causative	ake.saseru	kat.aseru
Causative Passive	ake.saserareru	kat.aserareru

Since the newly formed verbs belong to Class I, the division between stem and ending of the passive would be akerare.ru, katare.ru, and so forth. It will be noted that the chief difference between the derivation in original Class I and Class II verbs is that original Class II verbs end up with a separate form for the passive and potential while original Class I verbs use the same derived form for both of these categories. In addition to the causative passive endings shown above (-saserareru and -aserareru) there are non standard shorter endings -sasareru and -asareru which have the same meaning. We will not include these in the tables in the main body of the text, but they would be used with any verb which takes the longer forms.

The last two categories are the honorific and humble. Two forms are given for each, the second being that which shows the higher level of deference on the part of the speaker. Here, once again, we are dealing with completely new verbs so we present only their citation forms.

		Class I	Class II
Honorific	I	oake ni naru	okati ni naru
	II	oake nasaru	okati nasaru
Humble	I	oake suru	okati suru
	II	oake itasu	okati itasu

This table shows the typical derivation of honorific and humble forms wherein the infinitive of the original verb becomes a noun by the addition of the prefix o- and the inflectional endings are provided by the verbs nar.u ('to become'), nasar.u, su.ru, and itas.u (all 'to do'). Of these nar.u and itas.u are Class II verbs but su.ru and nasar.u are irregular. The student should consult the appropriate tables in the main body of the text to find out the inflectional forms of these two verbs as well as those of the seven other irregular verbs ar.u, gozar.u, ik.u, irassyar.u, kudasar.u, ku.ru, and ossyar.u.

In the honorific and humble categories a number of common verbs do not follow the typical pattern, but instead use suppletive forms which are not derived from the original verb. For instance, the verbs nasar.u and itas.u encountered above are, respectively, honorific and humble equivalents of the verb su.ru. Normally in such a case there will be only one form each for the honorific and humble categories.

Next we will present tables for the verbs ake.ru and kat.u showing all the inflectional and derivational categories which we have discussed. The form of these tables is the same as that which will be used throughout the main body of our text. (There is no standard arrangement or list of categories in use for teaching Japanese. The names for the ten basic inflectional categories have been taken from Bloch's study on inflection, but the content and arrangement of the tables in this book represent the author's opinion as to the most important forms of the Japanese verb and the most convenient arrangement for their presentation.) In order to assist the student in learning the distinctions between these verb forms the Japanese tables are followed by a chart containing English translations of each form of ake.ru. But before proceeding to these tables, three forms of the verb—the infinitive, the informal indicative, and the informal gerund—demand some additional comment.

THE INFINITIVE

The infinitive is the form of the verb which is used in making compound words. We have already seen how the addition of the prefix o- ‘deference’ changes an infinitive into a noun. There are, in addition, a number of nouns which are added to the end of infinitives to form compound nouns. For instance, kata ‘method’ and te ‘hand, doer,’ when added to the infinitive of tuka.u ‘to use’ give tukaikata ‘way of using,’ and tukaita ‘one who uses.’ Indeed, there are many infinitives which function as nouns without the addition of other elements. For example:

Infinite/Noun	Meaning	Verb	Meaning
kañgae	‘idea’	kañgae.ru	‘to think, consider’
warai	‘laughter’	wara.u	‘to laugh’
yorokobi	‘joy’	yorokob.u	‘to be happy’ nagusame	‘consolation’	nagusame.ru	‘to console, comfort’
utagai	‘doubt, suspicion’	utaga.u	‘to doubt, suspect’

To form an adjective from the infinitive, one simply adds one of a number of adjectival endings. We have already seen this happen when the negative ending -anai was added to the infinitive of verbs to form the informal nonpast negative indicative as in ake.nai. Other important endings of this type are -ta.i ‘desiderative,’ -yasu.i ‘easy,’ and -nikui ‘difficult.’ By attaching these endings to kaki one gets kakitai, kakiyasui, and kakinikui which mean respectively ‘want to write,’ ‘easy to write,’ and ‘difficult to write.’

There are also many verbs which are attached to the infinitives of other verbs to make compound verbs. We have already encountered -mas.u which is by far the most common. Three other important ones are -tagar.u ‘non-first-person desiderative’ (which, like -mas.u, occurs only as an ending in compound verbs), -hazimeru ‘to begin,’ and -naosu ‘to repair or fix.’ If we add these to kaki we get three new verbs: kakitagaru ‘to wish to write,’ kakihazimeru ‘to begin to write,’ and kakinaosu ‘to rewrite.’ Verbs indicating direction are very productive in combination with verbs of motion. For example, when the infinitive of the verb tob.u ‘to jump, fly’ is attached to agar.u ‘rise,’ ori.ru ‘to descend,’ kos.u ‘to cross over,’ and mawar.u ‘revolve,’ one gets the new verbs tobiagar.u ‘to jump up,’ tobiori.ru ‘to jump down,’ tobikos.u ‘to jump over,’ and tobimawar.u ‘to jump around.’

THE INDICATIVE

It is important to remember that all indicative verb forms can function as complete one-word sentences requiring neither subjects nor objects. Thus, regardless of whether they be formal or informal, past or non-past, affirmative or negative,

Akeru.	or	Akemasu.	‘(Someone) opens/will open (it).’
Aketa.	or	Akemasita.	‘(Someone) opened (it).’
Akenai.	or	Akemaseñ.	‘(Someone) does not/will not open (it).’
Akenakatta.	or	Akemaseñ desita.	‘(Someone) did not open (it).’

are all sentences.

When we add more information such as subject, object, time, and location, the indicative becomes the last word in a longer sentence as in:

Mado o akeru.	or	Mado o akemasu.	‘(Someone) opens/will open the window.’
Ano hito ga aketa.	or	Ano hito ga akemasita.	‘That person opened (it).’
Kyoo wa akenai.	or	Kyoo wa akemaseñ.	‘(Someone) will not open (it) today.’

The informal indicative plays a very important role in Japanese modification because it is the form which is used to modify nouns. In Japanese the modifier, be it verb, adjective, or noun, always precedes the noun which it modifies. Since the indicative is a sentence or ends a sentence, one is, in effect, modifying nouns with sentences. For example, the sentence Mado o aketa. '(Someone) opened the window,' can be used as a modifier in such phrases as:

mado o aketa hito	'the person who opened the window'
mado o aketa toki	'the time when (someone) opened the window'
mado o aketa syooko	'the proof that (someone) opened the window'
mado o aketa riyuu	'the reason why (someone) opened the window'
mado o aketa kekka	'the result of (someone) having opened the window'

THE INFORMAL GERUND

When ending a sentence (with or without following particles), the informal gerund indicates an informal request as in:

Tyotto matte (yo).	'Wait a minute.'
Soo ossyaranai de.	'Don't say that.'
and      Hayaku kite (yo).	'Come quickly.'

Gerunds have many functions when occurring within a sentence. When a sentence simply lists a number of actions without contrasting them or citing one as the cause of the other, all but the last action are often expressed by gerunds. For example, the two sentences A-sañ wa zyuusu o nomimasita. 'Mr. A drank juice.' and B-sañ wa koohii o nomimasita. 'Mr. B drank coffee.' can be combined in one sentence as A-sañ wa zyuusu o noñde, B-sañ was koohii o nomimasita. 'Mr. A drank juice, and Mr. B drank coffee.' If one wished to give strong contrast to these two actions, one would abandon the gerund in favor of an independent clause ending with the indicative: A-sañ wa zyuusu o noñda ga, B-sañ wa koohii o nomimasita. 'Mr. A drank juice, but Mr. B drank coffee.' Similarly, one would use the indicative if a cause-and-effect relationship is to be expressed as in A-sañ ga koohii o noñda kara, B-sañ mo koohii o nomimasita. 'Mr. A drank coffee, so Mr. B drank coffee too.'

A sentence in which the subject of all actions is the same, and which uses a gerund for all but the last verb in the sentence, indicates that the actions were performed in chronological order. For instance: Kao o aratte, gohañ o tabete, gakkoo e ikimasita. means 'I (you, he, they etc.)

washed my face, ate, and went to school.' But Kao o aratte, gakkoo e itte, gohañ o tabemasita. would mean 'I (you, he, they etc.) washed my face, went to school, and ate.'

The gerund has no tense, mode or aspect of its own, so all such information is expressed by the final verb in the sentence. Therefore, if we change the above sentence to Kao o aratte, gohañ o tabete, gakkoo e ikimasayoo. its meaning becomes 'Let's wash our faces, eat, and go to school.'

Gerunds within sentences are also used to express manner as in Eki made aruite ikimasita. 'I, (he, they etc.) went to the station on foot.' and Nani mo iwanai de dete ikimasita. 'I (he, she etc.) left without saying anything.'

We have already seen that in the informal imperative III the gerund combines with the imperative of kudasar.u to make a polite request as in Akete kudasai. 'Please open it.' and Akenai de kudasai. 'Please don't open it.' While the gerund may combine with any other verb if the combination makes sense, certain combinations which occur frequently have taken on special fixed meanings. Perhaps the most important of these is the combination of the informal affirmative gerund plus i.ru 'to exist.' Generally speaking, when the gerund of a transitive verb is used with i.ru the combination shows continuing action as in the English progressive, but when the gerund of an intransitive verb is used the combination shows the existence of a continuing state. A good example of this contrast is seen in comparing combinations using the gerunds of two verbs which mean 'to open.' Ake.ru is transitive and would be used to convey such information as 'I opened the door,' while ak.u is transitive and is used to convey such information as 'The door opened.' The transitive gerund akete plus i.ru means 'I (or someone else) am opening it.' On the other hand, aite iru from ak.u means 'It is (in the state of being) open,' NOT 'it is opening.'

Other productive gerund-verb combinations are those in which the gerund precedes sima.u 'to finish,' oku 'to put or place,' and the various verbs for giving and receiving. That with sima.u means 'to do something completely, to finish doing something,' or 'to end up by doing something.' That with ok.u means 'to do something in advance or with reference to the future,' while those with verbs for giving and receiving mean 'to perform an action for the benefit of another, to have another perform an action for one's own benefit,' or simply 'to benefit from the action of another.' The informal imperative III, which used the gerund plus the appropriate form of kudasaru ‘give to me,’ falls into this last group. Verbs of giving and receiving will be discussed at greater length following the main verb tables.

We should also mention the use of the gerund in combination with the particles mo and wa to express permission and prohibition. In asking for permission one uses the gerund plus mo as in Mite mo ii desu ka. ‘May I look (at it)?’ To answer that question in the affirmative one might say Hai (mite mo) ii desu. ‘Yes, you may (look at it).’ To refuse permission one might use the gerund plus wa as in Iie (mite wa) ikemaseñ. ‘No, you must not (look at it).’

We are now ready for our sample verb tables and tables of English equivalents.

SAMPLE TABLE OF ENGLISH EQUIVALENTS

In the following table of English equivalents two conventions have been adopted in order to avoid undue redundancy.

1. The same English translation is used to represent both the formal and informal verb forms, with the understanding that the formal will be more polite in tone.

2. Only affirmative translations are given because except where noted the student can easily deduce the meaning of the corresponding negative form.

Needless to say the translations offered here cannot hope to cover all possible cases because meaning is influenced by context. Nevertheless, they should serve to delineate the main semantic boundaries between the various forms.

Infinitive	opening (This form is non-committal as to level of formality, tense, aspect, affirmative or negative. It merely serves as a base for many endings, and sometimes to end a phrase.)
Indicative	I open (it), you open (it), he (she, it) opens (it), we (you, they) open (it) or: I (you, he, she, it, we, you, they) will open (it)
Imperative	open (it)! (The Informal Imperative III and the Formal Imperative are closer to 'please open it.')
Presumptive	I: I am going to open (it), we are going to open (it) or: Let's open (it) * (There is no negative form which corresponds to this second meaning of presumptive I.)
	II: I (you, he, she, it, we, they) probably open (it) or: I am probably going to open (it), you are probably going to open (it), he (she, it) is probably going to open (it), we (you, they) are probably going to open (it)
Provisional	if I (you, she, he, it, we, they) open (it)
Gerund	opening (it) (Non-committal as to tense and aspect which are established by the final verb in a clause or sentence.)

*NOTE: In this book and in Japanese dictionaries the informal affirmative indicative is used as the citation form for verbs.

Past Indicative	I (you, he, she, it, we, they) opened (it) or:	I (you, he, she, it, we, they) have opened (it) or:	I (you, he, she, it, we, they) had opened (it) (Indicates completed action.)
Past Presumptive	I (you, he, she, it, we, they) probably opened (it) or:	I (you, he, she, it, we, they) probably have opened (it)
or:	I (you, he, she, it, we, they) probably had opened (it)
Conditional	if I (you, he, she, it, we, they) should open (it) or:	if I (you, he, she, it, we, they) were to open (it) or:	when I (you, he, she, it, we, they) open (it)
or:	when I (you, he, she, it, we, they) opened (it)
Alternative	opening (it) and — (Non-committal as to tense and aspect. It merely indicates that two or more actions were, are, or will be performed alternately.)
Passive	is opened (by someone or something) or:	will be opened (by someone or something) or:	is opened (by someone) with bad result (for someone else)
or:	will be opened (by someone) with bad result (for someone else) (This form is sometimes also used as a sort of honorific to show deference for the person who performs the action.)
Potential	can be opened or:	can open (it)
Causative	I make (someone) open (it), you make (someone) open (it), he (she, it) makes (someone) open (it), we (you, they) make (someone) open (it)
or:	I (you, he, she, it, we, they) will make (someone) open (it)
or:	I allow (someone) to open (it), you allow (someone) to open (it), he (she, it) allows (someone) to open (it), we (you, they) allow (someone) to open (it)
or:	I (you, he, she, it, we, they) will allow (someone) to open (it)
Causative Pass.	I am made to open (it), you are made to open (it), he (she, it) is made to open (it), we (you, they) are made to open (it) or:	I (you, he, she, it, we, they) will be made to open (it)

Honorific	you open (it), he (she) opens (it) they open (it)
or:	you (he, she, they) will open (it) (all showing deference to the subject of the verb.)
Humble	I (we, or a member of my 'in group') open (it)
or:	I (we, or a member of my 'in group') will open (it) (The speaker shows deference by lowering his own position.)

ACCENT TABLES

We shall now present tables giving the basic accent patterns for verbs. Since the patterns for Class I and Class II verbs are different, four tables will be given, one for an accented verb and one for an unaccented verb in each class. The accent mark indicates a high-pitched mora directly preceding a low-pitched mora. Thus akérū indicates ākerū. The absence of an accent mark indicates a word in which all but the first mora have a high pitch as in osieru.

Since the accent pattern is the same for all verbs of a given type in the same class, verb tables in the main part of the book will only show the accent for the citation form. Since wakár.u is a Class II verb and is marked as accented, it will be clear that the accent of its gerund is wakátte, that of its non-past negative indicative is wakaránai, and so on. (The accent for other Japanese verbs can be found in Kenkyusha's Japanese-English Dictionary.)

It should be kept in mind that the accent shown in these tables is for the verb form in isolation and may change when the verb becomes part of a larger pause group.

VARIATION IN THE ACCENT OF 'UNACCENTED VERBS' DEPENDING ON ENVIRONMENT**

1. The informal affirmative non-past and past indicative forms of unaccented verbs acquire an accent peak on their final mora when they occur immediately before the particles ga, ka, kara, keredo, si, and **yori*, the sentence particles ka, kai, sa, and wa, the noun-substitute no, and some forms of the copula.

Examples: agarú kara, akerú keredo, hatarakú yori, hazimetá desyoo (alternates with hazimeta desyoo) and kaetá no.

2. The informal affirmative gerund of unaccented verbs acquires an accent on its final syllable when it occurs immediately before the particles mo and wa and the sentence particle yo.

Examples: kiité mo, kesité wa, and kimeté yo.

LOANWORD + SURU VERBS

All of the verbs with which we have dealt thus far have been composed of native Japanese elements. Japanese also contains a vast number of verbs which are derived from foreign loanwords (often nouns) by the addition of the native Japanese verb suru 'to do.' Thus siñpai	'worry'	+ suru gives siñpai suru 'to worry'

kekkoñ	'marriage'	+ suru gives kekkoñ suru 'to marry'
and hakkeñ	'discovery'	+ suru gives hakkeñ suru 'to discover'

Up to the mid nineteenth century the vast majority of such verbs were derived from vocabulary borrowed from Chinese. But from the Meiji period onward an increasing amount of vocabulary has been borrowed from European languages, and from English, French, and German, in particular. These loanwords, which have now reached flood proportions, are assimilated to Japanese in the same manner as the Chinese borrowings. Therefore, one finds in common use today such 'Japanese verbs' as kopii suru 'to copy,' anauñsu suru 'to announce,' and saiñ suru 'to sign.'

If they wish to communicate effectively in Japanese, English-speaking students must keep three points firmly in mind when dealing with Japanese verbs based on borrowings from English.

*In the case of yori, this alternates with the pattern of unaccented verb plus accented yóri as in hataraku yóri.

**The author is indebted to Professor Eleanor H. Jorden for her excellent treatment of these variations in the appendix to Beginning Japanese.

- 1) The words must be pronounced as they are by Japanese, not as they are in the original English. Remember, they are Japanese verbs.
- 2) Their meanings may differ as much from the original English as does their pronunciation.
- 3) They cannot be coined at random by combining any English word with suru. Use ones which you have observed Japanese using, and consult a native speaker if in doubt as to whether a particular combination is in use.

We shall now present one table for verbs of this type derived from Chinese nouns and one for those derived from English nouns. It will be noted that these verbs lack type I honorific and humble forms, that SOME Chinese-derived verbs are prefixed by go- rather than o- in the formal imperative and honorific forms, and that English-derived verbs are usually not prefixed by either.

ROMANIZATION

The first system of romanization for Japanese was devised by Portuguese missionaries in the sixteenth century, at which time it was used in a number of remarkable books, including a Japanese-Portuguese dictionary which is today used by Japanese scholars as the principal source for data on Japanese pronunciation of that period.

With the reopening of Japan to contact with Europe in the mid nineteenth century romanizations were developed based on the spelling in various European languages: a French-type romanization, a German-type romanization, and so on. Among them was an English-type romanization which came to be called “Hepburn romanization” because it first appeared in a Japanese-English dictionary published by James Curtis Hepburn, an American Medical missionary. It is this system, with some variation, which is commonly used in the U.S. press today.

Within Japan the debate on which romanization system is best has been long, and at times bitter, with competing factions each publishing materials written in their own system. The Japanese government has sought to bring scholars to a consensus on the matter, but even the designation of an official system in 1954 failed to end the debate.

The two main differences between the Hepburn romanization and the one used in this book are their treatment of two identical vowels which occur in juxtaposition and their treatment of certain consonants when they occur before the vowels i and u. We have already discussed the advantages of oo versus o in the section on pitch accent, so we will confine our discussion here to the second difference.

Whereas the Hepburn system has:      our system has:

sa	shi	su	se	so	sa	si	su	se	so
za	ji	zu	ze	zo	za	zi	zu	ze	zo ta	chi	tsu	te	to	ta	ti	tu	te	to
ha	hi	fu	he	ho	ha	hi	hu	he	ho

The Hepburn system uses shi, ji, chi, tsu, and fu because to the ear of a native speaker of English the consonants in the syllables thus represented sound closer to ENGLISH sh, j, ch, ts, and f than they do to ENGLISH s, z, t, and h. Thus it is based upon the perception of speakers of English and on distinctions which are valid in English. Our romanization is based upon the perception of speakers of Japanese and upon distinctions which are valid in Japanese. Analysis of the sound system of Japanese shows that although the pronunciation of JAPANESE s, z, t, and h is influenced by a following i or u it is perceived by Japanese as the same sound as when it occurs before other vowels.

Any system of romanization which represents all the sounds of Japanese in a consistent manner can be used in teaching Japanese IF THE ACTUAL JAPANESE PRONUNCIATION REPRESENTED BY THE LETTERS IS CLEARLY AND FULLY EXPLAINED AND DEMONSTRATED.

But the ideal romanization for Japanese is one which is based, not upon the sound systems of French, German, or English, but upon the sound system of Japanese. It is one in which each Japanese phoneme (minimum significant unit of sound) is consistently represented by its own symbol or combination of symbols. This is particularly true in a book like this, in which we are trying to give the clearest possible picture of Japanese inflection and derivation. Our romanization happens to be similar to the official Japanese romanization, and to that used in Beginning Japanese, but the main reason for our choice is that this romanization represents the Japanese sound system accurately, and hence, represents Japanese inflected forms accurately.

For example, when one uses the Hepburn system the infinitive, indicative, and imperative I of the verb kat.u become kach.i, kats.u, and kat.e, giving the impression that the stem ends in three different consonants. Similarly, these same forms for the verb kas.u ‘to lend’ would be rendered as kash.i, kas.u, and kas.e giving the false impression that the stem ends in two different consonants. Thus, an attempt to conform to English spelling would result in a distortion of Japanese inflection.

TABLES OF 501 JAPANESE VERBS

We are now ready to enter the main body of the text, which consists of tables of 501 common Japanese verbs showing all of the forms which were presented in our sample tables. The verbs are intransitive unless designated as transitive.

It is likely that students will approach this book looking for two basic types of information. Some will be seeking the inflection and derivation of a Japanese verb whose citation form they already know, while others will be trying to find a Japanese verb which fits a particular meaning in English. To provide for the first case, our verb tables are arranged alphabetically according to the citation form of the verb. Thus students who want to find out a particular form of the verb taberu can find it easily on page 419 between suwaru and tadoru. For the convenience of students who are seeking a verb with a given meaning in English, an English to Japanese index of all 501 verbs is provided beginning on page 505. Here students can look up ‘begin’ and find listed the intransitive verb hazimaru and the transitive verb hazimeru on pages 70 and 71 respectively. Thus, within the narrow limits of 501 verbs, this text also serves as a sort of Japanese-English, English-Japanese dictionary.

VERBS OF GIVING AND RECEIVING

In Japanese many verbs of giving and receiving have an intrinsic ‘directionality’ which helps to identify the person performing the act of giving. This is a big help to English-speaking students, because Japanese often omits explicit reference to the subject of a sentence.

The four verbs for giving which occur most often in spoken Japanese are ageru, yaru, kudasaru, and kureru.

Ageru means ‘I (you, he, she, or they) give TO SOMEONE OTHER THAN THE SPEAKER.’ Thus Okane o agemasita. could mean ‘I gave you money,’ ‘You gave him money,’ or ‘She gave them money,’ but it could not mean ‘You (he, she, or they) gave me money.’ Ageru also has an intrinsic element of politeness to the receiver of the gift, so it is used to describe giving to equals or superiors, or to anyone to whom the speaker wishes to express politeness or respect.

Examples:

Señsei ni agete mo ii desu. ‘You may give it to the teacher.’

Moo sukosi agemasyoo ka. ‘Shall I give you a little more?’

Okaasañ ni agete kudasai. ‘Please give it to your mother.’

Yaru too means ‘give TO SOMEONE OTHER THAN THE SPEAKER,’ but it differs greatly in that it lacks the politeness of ageru. Thus it is used to describe giving to an inferior. It is sometimes used for giving to an equal when speaking very plainly and informally, but since such judgments are extremely difficult for students, and since using yaru at the wrong time could offend the person one is speaking to or about, they are advised to use yaru only when talking about giving things to plants and animals. This is a safe usage, and one which is common in Japan.

Examples:

Imooto ni okasi o takusañ yarimasita. ‘I gave a lot of candy to my little sister.’ Sañzi ni inu ni esa o yatta. ‘She fed the dog at three o’clock.’ Taroo wa mada hana ni mizu o yarimaseñ. ‘Taroo has not watered the flowers yet.’

Kudasaru means ‘giving BY SOMEONE OTHER THAN THE SPEAKER,’ and is usually used to describe giving to the speaker or to a member of the speaker’s in-group such as a family member. Kudasaru forms a pair with ageru, but whereas ageru shows politeness to the recipient of the gift kudasaru shows politeness to the giver. It implies that the giver's position is superior to that of the speaker, or that the speaker is showing respect to the giver in order to be polite, as would commonly be done when the giver is present.

Examples:

Akai no o kudasai. 'Please give me the red one.' Señsei ga kudasatta hon desu. 'It's the book the teacher gave me.' Hiroko ni mo kudasatta no? 'You mean you gave some to (my child) Hiroko too?'

Kureru also means 'giving BY SOMEONE OTHER THAN THE SPEAKER' but it implies that the giver is equal or inferior to the receiver, so it is not used when one desires to show politeness or respect to the giver. It is often used when the giver is an institution rather than a person. It is also often used when describing a gift to the speaker by a person of roughly equivalent status who is not present. Though it is sometimes used to mean 'someone (other than the speaker) gives to you,' this usage is best avoided by students because it could give offense if used to the wrong person.

Examples:

Tomodati ga kudamono o kuremasita. 'My friend gave me some fruit.' Unteñsyu wa oturi mo kurenai de itte simatta. 'The driver went off without giving me my change.' Kodomotati ga hañkati o kureta. 'The kids gave me some handkerchiefs.'

The two common verbs for receiving are itadaku and morau. Itadaku means 'something is received by me or by a member of my in-group such as a close relative.' It is a humble verb which shows deference to the giver by placing the receiver in an inferior position. Therefore, it would not be used for 'you receive' unless the receiver is an inferior member of the speaker's in-group. A mother might say to her small child Maa señsei ni itadaita no? 'Did you receive it from your teacher?' when the teacher is present in order to show respect to the teacher.

Examples:

Okusañ ni kippu o itadaita no de, sibai o mite kimasita. 'We received tickets from your wife, so we went to the play.' Tomita señsei kara itadaita syasin wa doko desu ka. 'Where is the photo that you received from Professor Tomita?' Oheñzi o itadaite añsiñ itasimasita. 'I was relieved to receive your reply.'

Morau lacks the directionality of the verbs discussed above. It can mean ‘I, you, he, she, or they receive.’ Since it has the standard honorific forms of omorai ni naru and omorai nasaru, it can be used to express deference or politeness to the receiver. Its humble form is itadaku.

Examples:

Tomodati kara iroiro na mono o moraimasita. ‘I (you, he, she, they) received all sorts of things from friends.’ Zuibun ii tokei o omorai ni narimasita nee. ‘My, you certainly got a nice watch.’ Tanakasañ ni moratta no wa dore desyoo ka. ‘Which is the one that we got from Mr. Tanaka?’ Mada moraimaseñ ka? ‘Haven’t you received it yet?’ Miñna nani ka ii mono o morau desyoo. ‘Probably everyone will get something good.’

A thorough grasp of these verbs is required because, in addition to describing the giving and receiving of objects, they are also widely employed in describing actions done for another person’s benefit. In this construction the informal gerund of the verb which describes the action is used immediately before the appropriate form of the verb of giving or receiving. We have already encountered this construction in the imperative III in which the gerund is used before the informal imperative form of kudasaru to make a polite request. The same directionality applies as did in the giving and receiving of objects. That is, just as Riñgo o ageta. means ‘Someone gave an apple to someone other than the speaker,’ Riñgo o katte ageta. means ‘Someone bought an apple for someone other than the speaker.’ and so on.

Examples:

Kodomodati ni kurisumasu torii o katte yatta. ‘We bought a Christmas tree for the children.’ Kanai ga itumo boku no suki na mono o tukutte kureru. ‘My wife always cooks things that I like for me.’ Moo sukosi matte kudasaimaseñ ka. ‘Would you please wait a bit longer for me.’ Okaasama ni oisii okasi o motte kite itadakimasita. ‘Your mother brought delicious cake for us.’ (Literally ‘We received the bringing of delicious cake by your mother.’) Dare mo osiete kuremaseñ desita. ‘Nobody told me.’ Sono hana

wa dare ni okutte moraimasita ka. ‘Who sent you the flowers?’ (Literally ‘As for those flowers, by whom did you receive the sending?’). *Misete agemasyoo ka.** ‘Shall I show it to you.’* Señsei ga nañkai mo setumei site kudasaimasita. ‘The teacher explained it to me any number of times.’

A gerund plus morau or itadaku is also used when one person has another do something for them.

Examples:

Otetudaisañ ni señtakumono o tatañde moraimasita. ‘She had the maid fold the laundry.’ Nikuyasañ ni tori no ii tokoro o totte oite moratta. ‘I had the butcher save the good part of the chicken for me.’ Señsei ni setumei site itadakimasita. ‘I had the teacher explain it for me.’ Biiru o todokete moraeru desyoo. ‘You can probably have the beer delivered.’

We should also mention that a gerund plus moraitai or itadakitai constitutes an indirect request meaning ‘I want to have something done by someone.’ With itadakitai it usually means ‘I want to have something done by you.’

Examples:

Dare ka ni tana o tukutte moraitai desu. ‘I would like to have someone build me a shelf.’ Isya ni mite moraitai. ‘I want to have the doctor take a look at it.’ Sañzi ni irasite itadakitai desu. ‘I want to have you come at three o’clock.’ Ookiku site moraitai ñ desu. ‘I want to have them enlarge it.’

* Since this use of ageru implies the doing of a favor, it would not be used to a superior or to someone to whom special politeness or deference was intended. Instead, one would use the humble form of the verb describing the action. Thus, a clerk in a department store would not use this ageru construction when addressing a customer, but would say Omise simasyoo ka. or Omise itasimasyoo ka. for ‘I shall show it to you?’

INDEX OF VERBS BY GERUND

In the early stages of learning Japanese, students often have trouble in identifying a verb on the basis of its informal affirmative gerund. The following index should be of some help in this respect. It lists alphabetically all the informal affirmative gerunds found in the text and gives the citation form of the verb or verbs which correspond to each gerund.

The sound changes which occur when forming the gerund also take place when any suffix beginning with -t is added to the verb stem. Therefore, this index will also help in identifying a verb by its (informal affirmative) past indicative, conditional, or alternative forms. For example: the gerund of a verb whose past indicative is todoketa will be todokete; that of a verb whose past indicative is totta will be totte. Consulting our list of gerunds we find that these belong to todokeru (p. 451) and toru (p. 458), and if we consult the tables for these verbs we will find that, indeed, their past indicative forms are todeketa and totta respectively.
